Report of the President, William J. Trent jr.

'To Think and Act Anew'

St. Luke's experienced a change of leadership in 1970, as I was honored by my trustee colleagues who selected me as the sixteenth president of the Hospital Center, succeeding Henry B. Guthrie. As president, I pledge whatever talents I have to help in some small way to maintain the level of excellence of the institution.

President Lincoln once said: "The dogmas of the quiet past are inadequate to the stormy present. The occasion is piled high with difficulty, and we must rise to the occasion. As our case is new, we must think anew. We must disenthral ourselves, and then we shall save our country." Here is the essence of what we are about.

If Lincoln could remember a quiet past, he was more fortunate than we of the twentieth century. I must confess that I have not been privileged to live in any quiet past. The world has been in turbulence for all the days of our lives. I suspect that it is only when we remember the past with nostalgia that we think of it as being quiet. I know that my view more nearly describes the past of St. Luke's. It has not been quiet. It is true, however, that the present is piled high with difficulty—but, as in years gone by, St. Luke's will rise to the occasion. However, we will be required to follow the Lincoln-esque advice, and "think anew and act anew."

One of the difficulties confronting America today is the inadequate delivery of health care. Recently, I came across a pertinent observation on health care in Selig Greenberg's The Quality of Mercy. "The real quality of a society should be measured by how it orders its priorities, allocates its resources, and demonstrates the sense of social and moral responsibility needed to translate technical progress into human progress. In no area of our national life is there a greater gap between capability and competence and their translation into practical application than in the field of health care services."

We have not lived up to our national responsibilities, and because we have not voluntarily done so, solutions will be found through legislation. Mind you, this is not necessarily a bad thing. People have a way of insisting on solutions to problems—and if they are not found voluntarily, they will be found in other ways. It is my hope that the collective wisdom of the distinguished leaders in the health care field will be tapped, so that we will find ourselves with the best possible solutions.

Another of our difficulties is not a new one, but a worsening one—the matter of costs. To me, a layman recently come to the health care field, it is constantly amazing how hospital and other health care costs have increased during the past decade. Obviously, inflation must bear part of the blame, but this is the least factor. With costs increasing faster than revenue, hospitals such as St. Luke's are finding themselves in serious difficulty. Such a condition reduces severely the options available to a hospital as it seeks to expand and improve the efficiency of its operation. In this connection, new fiscal and budgetary procedures have been developed to assist members of the medical staff, administration and board of trustees in planning the Hospital Center's annual operation, and in putting priorities where necessary for more efficient use of its resources. The trustees of St. Luke's are aware of this serious financial situation and are earnestly seeking ways to improve it.

Rising wages and lack of incentive for cost control from the financiers of hospital revenues are important elements in the cost problem. Fortunately, 1970 saw the beginnings of a national dialogue on health costs, which we hope to see grow in a fruitful way.

The occasion, in President Lincoln's words, is "piled high" with another difficulty. St. Luke's, by its very location, finds itself involved in the health care of two well defined publics and its mission is to serve both equally well. There is the general public from all over the City and Nation that comes to St. Luke's because of the excellence of its professional services. There is also the public just outside the doors of the Hospital Center, with its pressing health care needs. Meeting the needs of the latter constituency will require greater community involvement than in the past. Our expanded community alliances, with the selection of neighborhood ghetto medicine and adolescent drug program advisory committees, are steps in the right direction. The establishment of an ambulance service and the expansion of outpatient facilities also point to a re-emphasis of our commitment to patient care and community medicine. This is one of our most exciting challenges. The long range planning committee has these new dimensions in health care high on its lists of priorities.

Finally, I am optimistic about our ability at St. Luke's to meet the required challenges. I know that we will find more innovative solutions to the difficulties confronting us. I know, also, that whatever we do here will have a profound effect on other institutions struggling with similar problems. It has been my privilege to have been a member of the board of trustees for five years; and in all of my relationships with trustees, medical staff, and administrators I have found a desire to work together to find better answers. This does not mean that there have not been differences. Of course, there have been, but differences are the life blood of any vital institution. What has struck me, however, has been the willingness of all, in the circumstances, to do the things that have to be done to keep St. Luke's in the forefront of America's great hospitals.

For all their efforts, their cooperative spirit and their eagerness to serve, I salute the entire St. Luke's family for a year of solid achievement. ■

At 120: Crises and Cautious Optimism

Report of the Executive Director,
Charles W. Davidson

"I am born." So begins David Copperfield published in 1850. St. Luke's was born that same year and has witnessed much change. An American president died of cholera in 1850. Harriet Stowe was drafting Uncle Tom's Cabin and the Missouri Compromise was agreed to in Washington. The Federal court in Boston had recently dismissed the first integration-of-the-races suit to be considered in this country. New York was recovering from the violence of the Astor Place Riots the year before, when twenty-three were killed.

It was a turbulent and troubled time when the Rev. William Augustus Muhlenberg opened St. Luke's—a time of loud voices and quiet progress, crises and cautious optimism. Not so strangely, it was a time like our own.

There was little time, in 1970, to celebrate our 120th birthday or to reflect on twelve decades of achievements. There was work to do and problems to be solved with never enough of the necessary time or money. Christopher Morley once called New York "the nation's thyroid gland." The gland was active in 1970.

In January, St. Luke's was stunned by the occupation of the off-campus quarters of our division of community psychiatry. Community groups commandeered the division offices and demanded that we expand our work in the care of drug users, particularly adolescents, from the West Side. The problem was so massive and our resources so limited that we saw little hope of doing more than continuing our already substantial commitment to methadone maintenance for adult addicts.

Yet, as happens so often in New York, the confrontation grew into co-operation and the resources were found. With the cooperation of Columbia University, their student infirmary located in our buildings was moved to another floor, thus enabling us to use the vacated space to establish a twenty-eight bed adolescent drug detoxification unit. Foundation, State and Episcopal Church funds were made available so that we could begin to provide, in unison with the community groups, a drug rehabilitation and prevention center on West 107th Street. The drug problem has hardly been dented, but a new sense of trust and mutuality of interest was forged between the Hospital Center and its neighbors. Here was further evidence of the value of community involvement in health care decision-making. This phenomenon began in the sixties and, understandably, will not abate with the passage of time.

The decade of the seventies opened in an atmosphere of turmoil for our voluntary hospitals. Ten years before, hospitals looked toward a period of buoyant growth with the promise of success on both the medical and fiscal fronts. Despite the enormous accomplishments of the sixties, we found ourselves, by 1970, on the horns of a herd of dilemmas—and with challenge our daily bread.

The problems of hospital management had ceased to be parochial, and expertise in our unique discipline was suddenly and stunningly insufficient to meet the new and broader questions confronting us. Resourcefulness, born of constant crises, was essential as was the willingness to employ new methods in answering new requirements.

The plight of the cities in general has burdened hospitals very heavily. Electrical and telephone services, taken for granted in the past, are insufficient. Ever spiraling inflation drove our operating expenses up to $39,195,300. The rising expectations and needs of hospital workers brought our minimum wage to $118 per week with several new and liberalized fringe benefits. The personnel costs of the Hospital Center account for more than seventy per cent of our budget.

An apparent revolt against never ending tax increases caused the State legislature to enact legislation designed to control the costs of hospital care by establishing controls on hospital revenues. The new, prospective, or revenue controlling system, sets the limit of our income with little ability for hospitals to expand or even cope with the existing health care consumer demand for service. The current system of rate promulgation for Blue Cross and Medicaid reimbursement establishes rates based on prior years costs adjusted by certain indices which do not provide for the costs of new programs or for special circumstances which may effect the costs of an individual institution.

Faced with diminishing income possibilities, St. Luke's chose to draw upon its reserve funds to meet, in so far as possible, the health care requirements of the community it serves. These reserve funds, built through years of careful financial husbandry, are now depleted. St. Luke's like its sister hospitals is faced with a cash flow crisis, which, without relief, can only result in a containment of services.

We have had to become better managers. To add to our management capabilities we added internal auditing and management engineering expertise to our staff. We sharpened our utilization of electronic data processing through the services of a facilities management company. A new patient representative system, tried on a pilot basis, has simplified the insurance and other financial wall of red tape which afflicts hospital patients. The program will be more fully implemented in 1971.

The efforts of past years began to see fulfillment when our relationship to Columbia University's College of Physicians and Surgeons became increasingly strengthened and our long range planning work came closer to fruition.

Because public policy more and more effects the workings of voluntary hospitals, we find hospital administrators spending more of their time in group efforts, trying to educate and influence the public and its representatives. As president of the State Nurses Association, Assistant Director Evelyn M. Peck was considerably active in the public arena. Edward M. Messier, who joined us in 1970 as associate director for fiscal affairs, was similarly engaged in inter-hospital affairs. I was privileged to serve as president of the Greater New York Hospital Association for 1970-71 and as treasurer of the Hospital Association of New York State. These extra-curricular activities kept me away from my desk at St. Luke's a good part of the time. Fortunately, our administrative staff, led by Administrator F. Dennis Harrington and ably supported by Associate Directors Gary Gambuti, Ralph Williams and Mr. Messier, and by Assistant Directors Floyd Oathout, Miss Peck and Arthur Slothower, carried on with their usual excellence. I am grateful to each of them. Mr. Slothower, a St. Luke's executive for over forty years, and my friend and colleague for a quarter of a century, retired in mid-year and his wise counsel is missed.

Among the new and welcome faces to the administrative staff in 1970 were: Assistant Director William Pyburn, Administrative Resident Gary Ross, Director of Volunteers Sarah Galanakis, Medical Librarian Nancy Panella and Director of Management Engineering William C. Staib.

I was happy to be able to announce that our two-year search for a new director of surgery had ended with the selection of one of St. Luke's outstanding surgeons, Dr. Hugh Fitzpatrick.

While the dollar drain and the constant effort to meet the demands for more space and more service were always with us, we did manage to implement several most important new activities. New York's abortion reform law raised a new need for service, which was met. Our hemodialysis and coronary artery surgery programs proved to be immediate successes. An expanded recreation therapy program for patients has been particularly well received.

Our Hospital Center "family" grows with the years and at our 1970 service awards dinner over eight hundred long-time employees were honored, including thirty-five year veteran Joe C. Davidse of the Department of Radiology.

Our plant and maintenance workers were unionized last year, but the service employees again determined that a hospital-wide union was unnecessary in a fourth State-supervised election in August.

We suffered the loss of several good friends and colleagues who died in 1970. Among them were: Trustees Clarence G. Michalis and Henry R. Sutphen, both of whom played so great a role in our development, Drs. Russell Apsey, Frank J. Massacco, Samuel W. Willis Jr., and Daniel O'Connell, and former Woman's Hospital Superintendent James U. Norris.

The threads of history were brought to mind as we observed our 120th birthday and prepared for the 75th anniversary of our relocation to Morningside Heights. The passing in St. Luke's of Alexander Kerensky, once president of Russia, gave us pause as we considered the changes in the world since his name commanded headlines a half century ago.

The board of trustees found a new leader in October and the entire administrative staff was more than delighted with the accession of William J. Trent jr. to the presidency. We also were reminded of the support and leadership we received in the past few years from his predecessor, Henry B. Guthrie. To both of them and to their board colleagues, to the members of the medical and other staffs and to the many others who make St. Luke's tick, I and my administrative associates are most grateful.

In Copperfield's words, "a long pull, and a strong pull, and a pull together" have been required of us. The stormy seas of the twentieth century continued to buffet us in 1970. Yet, even at age 120, St. Luke's was robust and even-keeled despite what seemed to be prevailing adverse currents. ■

The Heart of the Work

Report of the Director of Religious Services,
Chaplain Carleton J. Sweetser

Ours is a time of old traditions often yielding to new and different ways. The time-honored St. Luke's custom of the freshman class of the school of nursing singing the service of Evensong in the Hospital Center chapel at the end of each day ceased in 1970. It was for many in the Hospital Center family the regrettable end of a meaningful tradition in our corporate life and mission, but the day of compulsory chapel service in schools is over. The student body did vote unanimously to gather in the chapel for Evensong at such important times as graduation and capping. At the services of Morning and Evening Prayer, conducted daily by the chaplains, the needs of patients and our healing mission are still prayerfully commended to God in the chapel.

The chaplains, nevertheless, remain much involved in the school of nursing—in pastoral and social relationships with the students and concerns relating to present-day nursing education. Chaplains Sweetser, Udell and Hart, with the help of other clergy, conducted a number of seminars in the school on such subjects as "Spiritual Needs of Patients," "Love and Marriage," "The Dying Patient," and "Moral Aspects of Sterilization, Birth Control and Abortion."

Such a role—serving as a link between spiritual needs and the pressing concerns of modern medicine—is a major function of the Department of Religious Services. Chaplain Udell worked with members of the pediatric house staff on concerns relative to the dying child and his family and with the entire medical house staff on the difficult problem of blood transfusions for Jehovah's Witness patients. Several of the chaplain-interns became increasingly involved in various programs of the Department of Psychiatry, notably the emergency room, walk-in clinic and outpatient crisis group, an indication of the very thin line between mental health and spiritual welfare and of the common objective shared by doctors and pastors of making people whole. Chaplain Thomas Dillard played a valuable role in the adolescent drug addiction unit as teacher and counselor to many of its young patients. Two of the summer chaplain-interns did an informal study of the problems of patients in the emergency room.

An increasingly urgent concern in both medicine and religion, arising in large part from modern medicine's ability to prolong physical life, is that of the dying patient and his need for a personal and meaningful death. Vital to this is the kind of care and ministry he receives from all who are concerned for him. In this connection, the chaplains and chaplain-interns, with others of the Hospital Center staff, were involved throughout 1970 in a number of seminars and symposia devoted to growing sensitivity to this great human need.

The meetings were sponsored by such organizations as Cancer Care, The Thanatology Foundation, and our own social service department; and involved such pioneers in this field as Dr. Cicely Saunders of London and Dr. Elisabeth Kubler-Ross of Chicago. On a trip to England, Chaplain Sweetser spent a day at St. Christopher's Hospice, founded and directed by Dr. Saunders. A hospital with the special tradition of St. Luke's might be peculiarly fitted to pioneer in this country in a new understanding of the dignity of death.

Clinical pastoral education under Chaplain Hart remains a major program of the department, benefiting greatly our patients through the presence of the chaplain-interns. St. Luke's makes a major contribution, through its training program to the ecumenical ministry of the church and the general chaplaincy movement. In 1970, the Roman Catholic Church's participation in the St. Luke's program continued to grow. During the four quarters of training, five Roman Catholic and two Episcopal priests; one Roman Catholic, seven Episcopal, three Lutheran and one Baptist seminarians; and one Roman Catholic lay brother received clinical pastoral education here.

Chaplain Udell spent part of the summer at Bellevue Hospital serving as assistant supervisor in its clinical pastoral education program, resulting in his advancement by the national association to the status of acting supervisor. This accreditation makes it possible for him to supervise the 1971 summer quarter at St. Luke's and provides Chaplain Hart with some overdue relief.

A valuable addition to the staff was that of Reverend R. Mark Glidden, a young Episcopal clergyman from Chicago, who became our second fellowship chaplain for a one-year period.

On a broader scene of medical-religious concern, Chaplains Sweetser and Hart attended the first international symposium on the "Socio-Medical Aspects of Organ Transplantation in Human Beings" in Houston, and Chaplain Sweetser led the annual four-day Adelynrood conference on spiritual healing, near Boston. The annual assembly of Episcopal hospitals and chaplains and convention of the Association for Clinical Pastoral Education were attended by Chaplains Sweetser, Udell and Hart. Chaplain Sweetser serves as chairman of the Council of Churches committee on pastoral care for the Borough of Manhattan and on the Episcopal Mission Society's chaplaincy committee.

A most timely and welcome expression of St. Luke's church-relatedness was the Church's response to our new adolescent drug addiction program—a $1,000 gift from the Bishop of New York, an $8,500 emergency grant from the Executive Council of the Episcopal Church, and a $75,000 grant from the United Thank Offering of the women of the church. Ours was the second largest grant awarded at the national triennial meeting.

The heart of the work remains the ministry to our patients—newly admitted, long-term, pre-operative, seriously ill, dying and recovering—to their families, friends, and others who care for them.

Old and beloved traditions of both religion and hospital may fade in this day of change, but the ministry to people in need remains as urgent as ever. In St. Luke's, with staffs sensitive to the role of the spirit in the healing process, with the devoted cooperation of the Roman Catholic clergy of the Church of Notre Dame and Rabbi Jacob Kleinman, a host of volunteers and others, and our departmental secretary, Edith Jensen, it is a ministry that is ever new and exciting.

The Icing on the Cake

As always, the St. Luke's Auxiliary and the Woman's Assistant Board rendered important and valued service to the Hospital Center.

Both groups contributed to the volunteer program, manned the gift shops and raised funds for needed programs. Regular and well attended meetings were held throughout the year.

Mrs. Jeremiah Clarke succeeded Mrs. J. Winston Fowlkes in the auxiliary presidency, while Mrs. William Shields Jr., continued as president of the assistant board. Under their joint sponsorship, the groups raised over ten thousand dollars for the Dual Century Fund at their December dinner-dance at the St. Regis Hotel.

The auxiliary spring fashion show-luncheon proceeds went toward the purchase of a coronary artery cine-trace. Their November art show for the St. Luke's "family" drew nearly four hundred entries. The occupational therapy and social service departments, the nursing school and the new candy stripers program were vigorously supported by the auxiliary.

The assistant board sponsored English classes at Columbia for a promising resident, and was responsible for raising ten thousand dollars for the planned neo-natal intensive care unit at Woman's Hospital. The babies alumni program raised almost $7,500 in 1970.

Many of the Christmas and other "icing on the cake" activities at the Hospital Center during the year were a direct result of the splendid work of the auxiliary and the assistant board. ▀

Auditors' Opinion

To the Board of Trustees
St. Luke's Hospital Center
New York, New York 10025

We have examined the balance sheet of St. Luke's Hospital Center as of December 31, 1970, and the related statement of changes in fund balances and statement of income and expense for the year then ended. Our examination was made in conformity with generally accepted auditing standards and accordingly included such tests of the accounting records and such other auditing procedures as we considered necessary in the circumstances.

All securities owned by the Hospital Center at December 31, 1970 were held by the Manufacturers Hanover Trust Company as custodian, and income from interest, dividends and rents for the year under review are stated as shown in the records of the custodian.

In our opinion, subject to the foregoing, the accompanying balance sheet, statement of changes in fund balances* and statement of income and expense fairly present the financial position of St. Luke's Hospital Center at December 31, 1970 and the results of its operations for the year ended, in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles applied on a basis consistent with that of the preceding year.

Giving 1970

Shakespeare tells us in "As You Like It" that we all pass through seven stages of life. At the Hospital Center, each of those ages are cared for by people giving of themselves. Infancy, childhood, adolescence, young adulthood, productive middle age, mellowing maturity, and old age are our stages, each presenting distinct health care demands.

The people at St. Luke's and Woman's who carry on this life giving work and those who receive the gift of health were aided in 1970 by many friends of the Hospital Center.

Last year $247,234 was received in general purpose gifts; some $101,814 was in response to our Christmas appeal. The Dual Century Fund, which supports the construction of the new Service and Research Building raised $311,533.

Special purpose gifts and grants totalled $2,478,044. Included here were more than $1,657,000 for our Neighborhood Health Services Program and nearly $500,000 for our new adolescent drug treatment program. A sign of the times was the $1,407,363 in the form of grants for research, which is some three quarters of a million dollars less than two years ago.

Bequests to the Hospital Center were $288,315. The United Fund of Greater New York and the United Hospital Fund gave St. Luke's $128,192.

A sum approaching five million dollars was realized from grants and benefactions of all kinds. The national economy and reductions in government support for research activities added to the fiscal difficulties of America's voluntary hospitals. As our operating losses were nearly a million and a half dollars, the generosity of good friends, both old and new, became more important. With their help, we are attempting to provide that all of Shakespeare's ages will be "...better days, ... more sweet, ... more free from peril." ■

Our Benefactors

The following pages list information on giving and the names of many of the generous friends of the Hospital Center who have contributed to the support of the various special needs of St. Luke's and Woman's. Individual benefactors of one hundred dollars or more are listed by name. While space does not permit the listing of the many contributors of smaller amounts, our appreciation is nonetheless great. That the Hospital Center has been able to maintain its high standards of patient care is due largely to the continued interest and loyalty of all contributors. The Board of Trustees, on behalf of the professional staffs and all the Hospital Center personnel gratefully acknowledges this financial assistance. ■
